GPS COORDINATES NEEDED

GPS Coordinates Needed

With upcoming renewals and/or policy changes, our underwriters are again requesting GPS coordinates in addition to property addresses on your property schedule.

Please check your schedule today to make sure values are up-to-date with the rise of inflation, and that your GPS coordinates are all listed.

If you need help on where to find these, please give our office a call and we can work together to get these updated. We thank you for your help.

Water Use Surveys Inform Water Planning and Research

via texaswaternewsroom.org

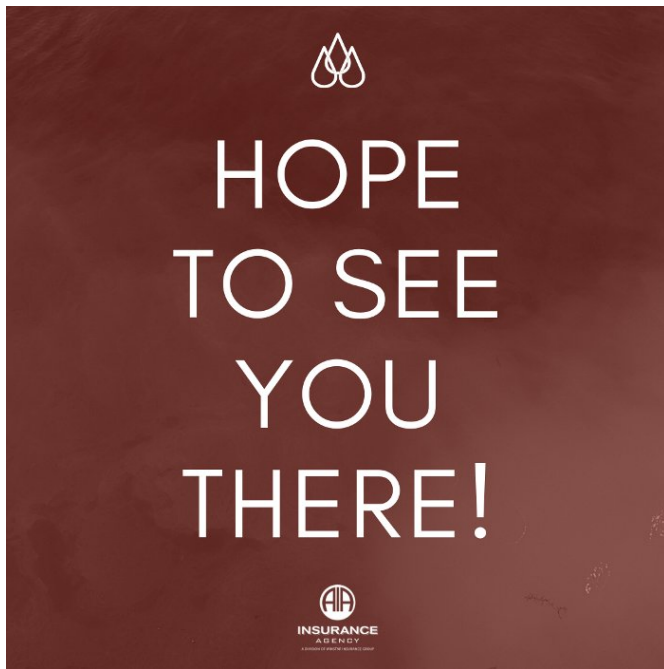

As population and water demand increase in our state, so does the need to accurately gauge how much water is being utilized so we can ensure we'll have enough supplies in times of drought. To support that mission, the Texas Water Development Board (TWDB) conducts an annual water use survey, which provides essential data about current water use and helps project future demand on water resources.

According to Yun Cho, the TWDB's water use and planning data manager, the survey is critical to understanding how our state's water resources are being utilized.

"The water use survey collects the volume of both ground and surface water used, the source of the water, water sales, reuse, and other pertinent data from public water systems and large industrial users," said Cho. "The data provides an important source of information in helping guide water supply studies, as well as regional and state water planning, that are dependent upon the accuracy and completeness of the information water users provide."

The TWDB began collecting water use surveys in 1955, and they're due to the agency every year by March 1. The agency solicits two types of water use surveys, collecting roughly 4,500 municipal surveys and 2,500 industrial surveys that capture the state's primary water using entities.
